The First Sad Intelligence.

On Wednesday, June 20, at 2 30 p.m., the great conflagration broke out in McLaughlin's boiler shop, Portland. A strong north westerly wind was blowing at the time, and in an incredibly short space of time flames burst out, carrying with them hundreds of houses, stores, and lumber yards. The fire spread rapidly towards the business portion of St. John, clearing in its career entire streets of buildings. Dock Street, Market Square, the whole of Prince William Street, Water Street, south side and part of north side, King Street, King's Square, Germain, Canterbury, Princess, Duke, Leinster, Charlotte, and Orange Streets. The whole of Lower Cove district, Sydney and Carmarthen Streets, portions of Wentworth and Pitt Streets. In fact, the entire city south of King Street, including wharves and shipping have been totally destroyed.

Among the public buildings destroyed are the new Post Office, valued at $200,000; the Custom House, Victoria Hotel, Academy of Music, Dramatic Lyceum, Royal Hotel, Bank New Brunswick, Maritime Bank, Agencies of Banks of Montreal and Nova Scotia, Savings Bank, Victoria School House, Grammar School, Trinity Church, St. Andrew's Church, Centenary Church, Germain Street Methodist Church, City Hall, Water Commissioner's Office, Banking houses of Simeon, Jones & Co., Western Union Telegraph Office, Daily Telegraph newspaper, offices of Daily News, Globe, Freeman and Watchman newspapers; News Room, all Insurance offices, Ritchie's building, Law offices, etc.

Among the leading business houses destroyed are those of Daniel & Royd, Richard Thompson, Jno. W. Nicholson, James Domville & Co., W. H. Thorne & Co., Thos. R. Jones & Co., Geo. F. Smith, Everitt & Butler, J. & W. F. Harrison, Hall & Fairweather, Turnbull & Co., Magee Bros., Stewart & White, Jas. Manson, J. & J. Hagan & Co., Watts & Turner, Eastern Express Office, H. Chubb & Co., Thos. Furlong, Hanington Bros., Geo. S. DeForrest, Geo. Stewart, Jr., Logan & Lindsay, Thos. H. Hall, Landry & Co., Wm. Thomson & Co., Andre, Cushing & Co., Guy Stewart & Co., Scammell Bros., E. D. Jewett & Co., the Police Office, and in fact every whole ale and nearly all retail houses were destroyed.

The only Bank saved was the Bank of North America. The Western Union Telegraph Office only saved instruments and books. Rafts laden with goods and household wares readily caught the flames, and were consumed. The fierce wind drove the flames to the south and east, and destroyed everything they met till they reached the water's edge. Thousands of people wandered the streets homeless and in despair. The destruction of provisions of all kinds pointed to famine; had not relief come in speedily, many must have perished from want, as but few saved even their clothes.

The Gas Works were destroyed leaving the city in darkness.

The fire fiend not satisfied with getting decidedly the best of the hand-to-hand encounter, the destroyer began artillery practice in an effective manner, kindling the roofs of numerous houses with his fiery shots. House after house in Germain and Horsfield Streets caught from the air-borne messengers of destruction, and nothing but the constant watchfulness of men on the roofs prevented their burning. One volley of fiery particles, higher and of longer range than the others, struck Mr. John E. Turnbull's factory and beautiful house at Lower Cove, more than a mile distant, and quickly wrapped them in flames. So quickly did Mr. Turnbull's stone house succumb that little or nothing was saved, and Mrs. Turnbull had to be taken out of the second story window, her escape by the stairs having been cut off by the fire. This became the centre of another fire radiator, and the surrounding buildings were soon a flame, there being no engine to interfere with the progress of the devouring element.

Soon after this, one or two buildings in Horsfield Street were ignited, a building or two in Germain Street next caught, and Trinity Church began to blaze, carrying consternation to every beholder. The flames ran up the tall steeple, danced merrily on its pointed summit, and ran along the gable-ends and roof ridge. It was a sad sight to see the noble old structure, which had pointed the way to Heaven for the loyalists and the generations that have walked in their footsteps, burned to the ground. The neighboring buildings on Germain Street soon caught fire, and the flames ran down the street to Notman's Studio, to the Germain Street Methodist Church, to St. Andrew's Church to the Victoria Hotel, that lofty structure, one of the finest hotels in America, soon succumbing after surrounding houses were clothed with fire. The guests had been on the roof for an hour or two, watching the fire at what they supposed a safe distance, and did not become alarmed for the safety of themselves and their guests until Trinity Church became a pillar of fire that scorched their faces with its heat and blinded their eyes with smoke and cinders. There was a scramble for effects, a running and racing through the passage, a din of voices giving orders and seeking aid.

The streets presented a fearful spectacle. Queen Square was packed in density with people and their household effects. This part soon became the centre of a whirling seething, devastating torrent of fire, north, south, east and west. First they were driven east, then north; still pursued by the flames they were driven west, and found rest only in the extreme northern portion of the town. Men women and children, all huddled together, ran frantically from one point to another. Boats from Portland and Carleton conveyed load after load to both these localities. To the misery of wretchedness and despair was added the pangs of hunger.

The steamer "Empress" could not land her passengers as the wall of fire intervened between the wharf and their homes, and passengers and refugees were kept on board all night, the steamer lying at the island.

Many escaped into Courtney Bay on rafts, some of them taking their rescued household effects with them.

Deeds of Heroism, Incidents, Accidents, Incendiarism, Villainous Acts, Etc.

were numerous. One instance was the bravery exhibited by the men of No. 3 steam engine. It being impossible to detach the horses, it was dragged by hand through Dock St., and took its stand on the Market Square, when in less than half an hour it became the centre of a maelstrom of fire. North and South Wharves, Water and Prince Wm. Sts., the Barlow Building, and north side of Market Square were belching out suffocating smoke and flame, and the dust whirled in blinding clouds, but still No. 3 stood its ground. Not until it became evident that King Street was doomed did it remove in another direction.

Amongst those who were badly burned was Thomas Sloven, who has been noted for his bravery by saving of life from drowning. He has now distinguished himself by saving the lives of children from fire.

An unknown lady did noble service in deluging the walls of a building in danger with water from a pail; and a boy, 10 years old, son of the late Jeremiah Murphy, seized his little brother, 2 years old, and jumped from the second storey window, thereby saving the child's life.

A woman and her new born child, born in the midst of the panic, were picked up dead in the street—one of the saddest scenes of this horrible tragedy.

A poor woman who locked her four children in a room to prevent their straying while she went out to ascertain the extent of the fire, had not time to return before her dwelling with its inmates were wrapped in flames.

Before relief could be fully distributed some of the citizens had been a day and a half without food. Eighteen dollars a barrel was the exorbitant demand for flour before relief came.

A very sad story is in connection with the burning of the Victoria Hotel. When the man who was supposed to be the last to come out before the walls fell in, came out, he left about 15 or 16 men in the cellar, where they had gone some time before to get liquor from the casks which were stored therein. As far as can be ascertained, it is believed that they all perished when the building fell.

A woman and child were burned to death in a house on Smyth St. She was last seen standing at a window with the child in her arms, frantically shrieking for help. Assistance was impossible, and in less than two minutes after she was engulfed in flames.

The troops (97th) from Halifax were encamped on the Chipman Grounds, Union Street. There were 200 St. John volunteers turned out to aid the civil power, and many special constables were sworn in.

Some serious accidents occurred while volunteers and artillerymen were engaged in blowing up the ruins, to remove dangerous walls. While discharging a blast in the Post Office wall three men named Lamb, Anderson, and Ewing, were seriously injured.

Notwithstanding the wide-spread distress, the cupidity of man was added to the destruction of fire. Numbers of thieving rascals hovered around the property saved, to appropriate whatever they could carry off. The jewelry stores especially suffered; wherever one was open, they rushed in and seized upon watches, rings and all that was worth taking. In nearly every direction from the burning districts, men and boys were to be seen carrying boxes, bundles and articles of all kinds—as the fruits of spoil; and what was saved, became a loss to the owner equally as if destroyed.

While the great fire was raging in the north of the city three men were found deliberately setting fire to a house. In the confusion the rascals made their escape. Four other incendiaries are under arrest; one of these had a narrow escape from being lynched by the mob; as it was, he received a bullet fired from a revolver in the hands of an indignant citizen. Two others were arrested for burning a house in Indiantown.

A determined attempt was made to set fire to the Intercolonial freight house, which was occupied by the poor homeless unfortunates.

Two men were found with oakum, saturated with paraffin, attempting to fire a building, but escaped.

That there was a regularly organized attempt to burn down Portland there appears to be no doubt, as fires were started at the same time in many different places.

It was a glorious morning after the fire, dawning on a dismal scene—no fairer sunrise ever gilded a more depressing spectacle. The fire had about burned itself out for lack of fuel, and the daylight robbed the still living flames of all their brightness and splendor. There was a weird, woeful waste of rickety chimneys, tumble-down walls, gaping cellars, smoking brick heaps, etc.

Nearly every forward movement of the fire might have been prevented, according to the opinion of spectators, "if an engine had been there" at the critical moment. South Wharf, and all below it might have been saved, was the opinion of most people, if an engine had been on duty there at the right time. It would appear that the firemen lost ground many times by attempting to put out a fire on one side of a street instead of devoting all their energies to keep it spreading to the other side.

The Custom House was a fearful yet magnificent sight to behold, containing as it did so much spirits, the flames mounted high into the air and raged wilder than ever over its destruction.

Old Trinity was a sad though grand sight while burning. The flames enveloped this venerable and much-prized edifice, clearing out everything but the frame first. The coat of arms which was so precious to St. John's people on account of its history—it having been brought there by the royalists and loyalists from New York or Boston, when the city was founded—this was rescued. Every one enquired after the coat of arms, and all seemed delighted that it was saved. The old clock gave up the ghost at two minutes past five o'clock in the afternoon Tuesday, and went the way of all the world, after a long clock life, at least for America, which is too new to contain many ancient landmarks.

A woman was seen to rush to a window for aid and fall back insensible, surrounded by flames, when a brave fireman mounted a ladder and disappeared for an instant from view, in search of the helpless victim, returning almost in a breath, bearing her safely in his arms, amid the shouts of the crowd below.

Mrs. Lyon and her daughter perished, while making an effort to save some of their property. The lost are by no means confined to firemen, and men who worked constantly near the flames to save life and property; rich men, young and old, were killed.

Mr. Kelly, the Treasurer of the Theatre, while assisting some friends on board a ship, found an old lady, at least seventy-five slowly wandering along poorly clad in a thin and worn old gown and without a shawl or bonnet, and forlorn, except for the companionship of a kitten that clung to her dress as she escaped from a burning tenement house. Mr. Kelly sent the poor creature to her friends out of town.

When the jail became in danger the prisoners were all in the main corridor waiting to know their doom. A young man called there to speak to a man on business. He was not permitted to enter, but spoke through the bars. Ellis, the forger, asked him "If they would be allowed to roast alive." The jailor stood waiting for orders, and when one end of the jail caught fire it was reported that a number were set free. This terrible suspense must have been a sore reminder of their offences and possible penalties. They acted like a lot of caged animals.

Mr. William Nannary suffers heavily; nothing was saved at the Academy of Music; scenery, wardrobe, books—everything that goes to furnish a theatre well, lies in ashes. These belonged to Mr. Nannary. His money also lies in uncertainty, in a safe under a mountain of debris.

Story of an Eye Witness.

Where all those who were deprived of house and home have packed themselves can scarcely be imagined. Of course every hotel and boarding house in St. John is overflowing. The better classes are bestowed in all the villages around. Portland and Carlton are crammed, and many have gone up the Intercolonial Railway line. The poorer classes who were burnt out at York Point and Lower Cove,—localities corresponding to our Albermarle, Grafton and the upper end of Maynard Sts., are for the most part unable or unwilling to do anything in the way of providing accommodation for themselves. Very few availed themselves of the tents and marquees placed at the disposal of the Committee by the Militia and regulars. Only one or two families have been passing the night in the tents of the 97th in Chipman's field. The great bulk of homeless paupers are at present in the Rink. Had this splendid building been destroyed, it is hard to imagine, what could have been done with the hordes of gaunt famishing creatures now stacked about its walls. It affords a most curious and melancholy scene. A double row of barrels and a circular counter, guard the stores of provisions from the clamoring throng outside. Behind this barrier stand the Active Relief Committee, distributing food and supplies of clothing. One man on duty at the building, and on full pay, asked for a barrel of flour from the relief supplies, and, of course, was refused. Another was more successful; a man, the proprietor of two houses in Carleton, at present crowded from roof to cellar with lodgers, demanded and received a barrel of flour, which was made into bread and sold at exorbitant prices to his impoverished boarders. Such instances as these have forced the committee to adopt stringent methods of distributing relief. On the raised platform that encircles the skating floor of the Rink, is encamped a squalid and most miserable tribe of people. They are mostly old women, too feeble to travel about the city, women with infants in arms, and small children. They lie huddled together for warmth, and in the majority of cases, with nothing at all to cover them but an old and tattered quilt. The number that thus find accommodation varies from 400 to 600. The worst sign is their evident intention of getting as much as possible out of the Relief Fund. A lot of hulking loafing vagabonds, who have lived on charity since the fire, were to be seen standing about the door of the Rink, where a contingent of flour arrived. They were asked to assist in rolling the provisions intended for their own use and that of their families into the building, and they actually refused to do so unless paid at the rate of twenty cents an hour.

New Arrangements.

The Post Office has been for the present established in the country market building.

The Custom House head quarters are established in the Court House.

The Electric Telegraph Office is in the Railway Station.

Police head quarters are for the present in the Court House.
